Migrants: The Story of Us All by Sam Miller

Hardback £20.00 ~~£25.00~~

Sam Miller's new book Migrants: The Story of Us All is an alternative history of the world, in which migration is restored to the heart of the human story - and in which Totnes plays an unexpected role.

Not long ago, the settled peoples of many parts of the world were proud of their ancient migrant ancestry, real and imagined. This was also true of Britain. And Totnes plays a central part in one of this island's oldest stories - that Britain was founded by a Trojan migrant called Brutus who, it was said, declared on arriving: 'Now here I sit, and here I rest And this town shall be called Totnes'

Find out more when Sam Miller comes to the bookshop on the evening of June 29th to talk about his book, and explains why Totnes was once thought to be the oldest human settlement on this island.
